

CHICAGO, SATURDAY, JUNE 28, 1890.

NO. 39

General Proceedings of the Republican State Convention.

Gentlemen of the convention, again we have assembled as representatives of those engaged in every industry of this great State to declare our political faith and to place in nomination for the offices to be filled at the next State election representatives of those principles upon whom we deem worthy in personal character, honesty, integrity, and true Republicanism to represent those principles in the coming campaign. We come as representatives of a party whose history is written in every national legislation not which has added to the national wealth of our country, in its commercial wealth, or to the happiness as well as of the individual as well as during the last thirty years. We look back with pride upon the grand achievements of the Republican party as a nation having restored financial order at the close of the civil war, a noteworthy reduction of the public debt, a restoration of commerce and public and private institutions.

BEHOLD, FARE IN THE GREAT FUTURE.

IN ALL OF THEM AND OUR GREAT STATE.

Gentlemen, I thank you sincerely for the compliment you have paid to me in my selection as your Temporary Chairman. What is the further pleasure of the convention? [Applause.]

Charles A. Partridge, of Lake, was made Secretary, with J. C. Edwards, of Peoria, John Leach of Richland and T. R. Gartsöfer of Madison as assistants, and the convention elected the following State Central Committee:

First District—Play B. Smith, Chicago.
Second—J. J. Clark, Chicago.
Third—Henry L. Kerr, Chicago.
Fourth—R. S. Conway, Chicago.
Fifth—W. S. Finney, Aurora.
Sixth—C. S. Boyer, Brookfield.
Seventh—Thomas Miller, Sterling.
Eighth—Thomas L. Fawcett, Okauch.
Ninth—Dr. U. A. Wilson, Mazon.
Tenth—James G. Edwards, Peoria.
Eleventh—Frederic Roberts, Mountain.
Twelfth—M. B. Smith, Quincy.
Thirteenth—C. Maxwell H. Paul, Springfield.
Fourteenth—E. B. Raine, Lincoln.
Fifteenth—David H. Clark, Mendota.

Then some delegate roared, "Four delegates!" The Senator from the second row up and said: "There are forty two of us, and don't you forget it. We are for Lindley."

A roll-call was ordered. Adams County, the first on the list, asked to pass its vote. The convention would not listen to it, and the clerk was ordered to go ahead. This is the result of the roll-call announced by the Secretary:

[illegible]

A POLL-PARROT under the influence of a jag was witnessed by several persons in the Mercy Hospital, Pittsburg. It escaped from its cage, and found a cup of alcohol in the drug-room. Of this it drank until it staggered. About this time one of the house physicians entered, and the depraved bird swore at him with frightful vehemence, and bit him in the hand. Then, half flying, half leaping, Polly commenced to make for the entrance hall with unsteady gait, weaving in a manner that caused the waiting visitors to stop their ears. Just then one of the sisters arrived, and found this frightful example to all this blaspheming in the center of the hall, while the visitors were collecting in all directions. And was promptly dismissed. Polly was returned into a cage, where it could sober up.